German Sets Record in Swimming Across English Channel

OTTO VIERKOETEN OF GERMANY SWIMS FROM FRENCH COAST TO POINT ON SHORE OF KENT

German Athlete Cuts Down Gertrude Ederle's Record by Nearly Two Hours; He is Eighth Person to Achieve Fame by Conquering Turbulent Stretch of Water

Dover, Eng., Aug. 30.—Otto Vierkoeten of Germany to-day swam the English Channel.

He landed at 2.15 o'clock this afternoon at Langdon Stairs, half-way between Dover and St. Margaret's Bay, near Cape Gris Nez, France, where he had entered the water at 1.35 a.m.

The elapsed time of the swim, according to the figures, was twelve hours and forty minutes, or nearly two hours better than the record of fourteen hours and thirty-one minutes established by Miss Gertrude Ederle on August 6.

The landing was witnessed by only a few soldiers, who ran down from the Langdon Battery above the beach. The soldiers carried the swimmer to his small boat, which conveyed him to the accompanying tug.

As the German swimmer neared the shore a heavy mist set in and the great crowds that watched him were unable to get down to the beach where he landed.

EIGHTH SUCCESS

Vierkoeten is the eighth person to swim the channel, and the first man to perform the feat this year.

Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. C. Corson, both of New York, are the only others who have swum across this year.

Sebastian Tiraboschi, Argentinean, held the record previous to this year at 16 hours and 52 minutes.

Miss Ederle, the first woman, to conquer the Channel, set a sensational mark with her 14 hours and 31 minutes.

Vierkoeten is the holder of many championships in Germany.

New York, Aug. 30.—Walter Linsberg, local fire dealer, financed the English Channel swim of Mrs. Clemington Corson during her training period, and then placed a bet of $5,000 with Lloyd's of London that she would succeed by September 1.

He got odds of twenty to one on his bet, and won $100,000 as the result of her victory, he said to-day.

Mrs. Corson swam across the channel last Saturday in fifteen hours and twenty-eight minutes.

Linsberg issued a challenge on behalf of Mrs. Corson to everybody. Miss Ederle was excepted, to swim around Manhattan Island for a purse totaling the amount he won.

Dudley Field Malone, speaking for Gertrude Ederle, said Miss Ederle would consider "such a challenge when it is received."

INCREASED WEIGHT

Mrs. Corson weighed 170 pounds when she finished training for the channel swim, said Linsberg. She is five feet five inches tall. When she sailed for Europe in June she

PRAIRIE FARMERS CALLING FOR MANY MORE WORKERS AS THRESHING GETS UNDER WAY

Winnipeg, Aug. 30.—Manitoba is already feeling an acute shortage of harvest help, which, when threshing becomes more general, is expected to spread to the other two prairie provinces. Reports received in Winnipeg indicate Manitoba farmers are besieging employment offices in the various centres, but that the needed help for garnering the excellent yields of wheat and other grains can not be obtained. Brandon, it is reported, needs 500 men at once for work in that district alone. Portage la Prairie could find employment for a similar number.

Efforts will be made to secure harvesters from the United States, according to an announcement made here to-day.

Reduced fares will be given to harvest workers from the United States who report at international border points in Western Canada from September 1 to September 15 inclusive. Certificates for entry into Canada, authorizing the reduced train rates, will be provided by Government agents.

An influx from across the border is anticipated.

ALBERTA SITUATION
Calgary, Aug. 30.—While the shortage of harvest help in this district is not acute at the present time, officials of the employment office state that when threshing becomes more general, many more men will be required.

FIGHTING BREAKS OUT IN SYRIA

Damascus, Syria, Aug. 30.—Coincident with the appointment of Auguste Henri de Pons to succeed Henri de Jouvenal as French High Commissioner in Syria, fighting has broken out between the French and dissident tribesmen in three different and widely-scattered parts of the mandated territory.

Most of the signatories are naturally of pacifist tendencies, but the manifesto bears the names of two German generals, Von Deimling and Von Schoenich. Among others whose names are attached are President Paul Loeb of the German Reichstag; Mrs. Annie Besant, English; Professor Albert Einstein, German; M. K. Gandhi, India; George Lansbury, M. P., England; Lord Parmoor, England; Arthur Ponsonby, Bertrand Russell, England; Dr. Ignaz Seipel, Austria; Robert Smille, M.P., England; Philip Snowden, M. P., England, and Prof. Emil Svoboda, Czechoslovakia.

In the first draft of the covenant of the League of Nations, says the manifesto, "President Wilson proposed to make conscription illegal in all affiliated countries. It is our duty to restore the original spirit which created the League, a spirit shared by many of those who fought in the World War and professed by many statesmen of the countries concerned. By the universal abolition of conscription we can take a decisive step towards peace and liberty."

YOUNG WOMAN AND HIMSELF
Toronto, Aug. 30.—Elmo David Aido, twenty-two, shot and killed himself and a young woman, and was killed himself, in a room in his parents' home on Dundas Street West here to-day, and then shot and killed himself, according to the police.

Miss Colwell was a graduate nurse and formerly resided in Newcastle, Ontario.

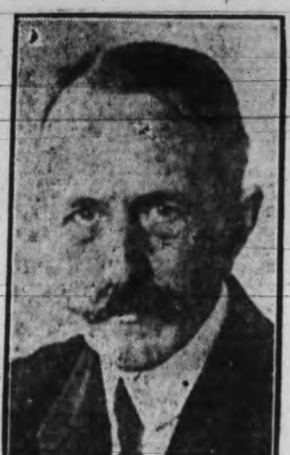

The two were to have been married September 7, a week from to-morrow.

A note left on the man's dresser said the shooting was the result of a suicide pact, the reason being interference in their affairs by others.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD CHILD VICTIM OF AUTOMOBILE

Doris Duncan Near to Death After Pandora Street Accident To-day

Struck down by an automobile driven by M. Kirkpatrick-Crockett at 11.30 o'clock this morning while she was playing on Pandora Avenue, little Doris Duncan, five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Vera Duncan, 931 Macon Street, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, conscious but in a very grave condition. According to Dr. Archibald Sinclair, the physician who attended her, she is suffering from fractured bones of the face, a split palate and very probably a fractured skull.

"Little Doris Duncan is very badly injured," said Dr. Sinclair as the baby victim was coming out of the anaesthetic which had been administered at the hospital. "I believe she has a fractured skull. It is impossible to say whether she will recover. Just now she seems to be in fair condition, considering, but more serious complications may set in."

The little girl, according to police, was playing by the side of the road when the machine was approaching, proceeding west. Just as the car was close upon her she ran across the street, and the driver swerved sharply to avoid striking her. The front bumper struck the child and sent her crashing to the ground upon her face, knocking her insensible.

FAMILY OF TRAGEDY

It was not long ago that little Doris lost her father, James Duncan, one of the victims of the tug hoo disaster at Bentinck Island. Duncan, with six other men on their way to work in the lumbering industry, was on the tug hoo when it was struck by a lumbering machine and sank in the water.

Doris's little brother, during days of celebration, about a year ago, was struck in the eye when an exploding sky-rocket, and lost the sight of one optic.

CHARGE BASED ON VOTERS' LIST FAILS

A. G. Ferguson Freed of Accusation of Perjury by Vancouver Magistrate

Vancouver, Aug. 30.—The charge of perjury against Amos G. Ferguson, a Liberal campaign worker, in connection with alleged objections paid to nearly 4,000 names on the Federal voters' list in division one, Vancouver Centre, was dismissed in police court by Magistrate H. A. Findlay this morning.

After defining perjury, the magistrate declared:

"Apparently some person connected with the preparation of the affidavits did intend to mislead the revising officers, but that person was not Ferguson. He is a simpleton rather than a criminal."

SUGGESTIONS ACCEPTED
"Ferguson went further in swearing to these affidavits than any wise man should do. He apparently was content to take the suggestions of his adviser, but he should have let those who prepared the affidavits swear to them."

"If Ferguson had sworn to the affidavits with the intention of misleading the revising officers, he would be guilty as charged, but after hearing the evidence and taking the depositions of the accused on the stand, I am convinced he had no criminal intent."

VALENTINO FUNERAL ATTRACTS THOUSANDS

Many See Body of Movie Actor Carried Through New York Streets

New York, Aug. 30.—Broadway, where Rudolph Valentino once worked as a dishwasher, to-day paid farewell to the man who died at the height of his career and shock of the Movies. The famous thoroughfare was lined with many thousands as the funeral cortege moved to St. Malachi's Roman Catholic Church, two miles away.

Members of the police bomb squad patrolled the funeral route and stood guard outside the funeral parlour and the church.

Pola Negri, the Polish actress, who announced before Valentino's death that she was engaged to marry him, and Jean Acker, the dead actor's first wife, who had said she was devoted to him just before his death, followed the coffin as it was carried into the church.

TANGIER CONTROL IS NEW PROBLEM

Spain's Sovereignty Demand Affects League Council Membership Question

Geneva, Aug. 30.—Thrusting itself suddenly into purely League of Nations problems, the Tangier angle arising from Spain's demand for sovereignty over the Moroccan port threatens to complicate greatly the settlement of the League crisis involving the claims of both Spain and Poland for permanent seats in the Council.

Both Great Britain and France are opposed, it appears, to the suggestion for a special Tangier conference in Geneva immediately, and equally lukewarm to granting Spain a permanent seat in the Council.

PALACIOS IN GENEVA
Emilio de Palacios, the Spanish representative on the commission for the reorganization of the Council, arrived last night and was a conspicuous figure in the new political drama about to be enacted in Geneva.

The reorganization commission is meeting to-day and Great Britain and France are expected to make clear that nothing must be permitted to interfere with Germany's clear and conspicuous figure in the new political drama about to be enacted in Geneva.

LONDON TRAFFIC GYRATORY, BUT CRUSH IS NOT RELIEVED

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Aug. 30. — London's traffic is becoming so dense that the authorities have been impelled to sudden energy during the last six months.

There seems some danger, indeed, that they are hurrying too much and thinking too little. The gyratory, or merry-go-round system, for instance, is being extended rapidly beyond the original Parliament Square experiment without any of the lessons of that simplest of the schemes having been taken to heart. Three or four lines of traffic travelling in the same direction continue to swirl round three squares, sorting themselves out as best they can in the rush for the various side turnings.

Though the car driver is painfully aware of the fact, no one in authority seems to have discovered that unless the roadway at the corners of these squares is divided by white lines into channels the driver near the curb is always in danger of being crushed on to the footway by neighboring vehicles that choose to cut the corner in front of him.

And what of the poor pedestrian? The traffic pace round these squares is appalling, and the driver who tries to slow up to make room for a bewildered pedestrian in the centre of the roadway is simply inviting a smash from behind.

Another aspect of the traffic problem is concerned with the safety of driving. The authorities have set their faces against driving tests, but are considering whether driving licenses should be issued to persons suffering from physical disability. This is toying with the question of road accidents. Any Disabled Drivers' Club will demonstrate the ability of its members to save the lives of thoughtless people who suddenly step backwards off a moving bus in the middle of a crowded thoroughfare or commit the hundred and one other follies that legless and similarly disabled drivers counter successfully in the course of a year's driving.

Mosquito Shortage Faces New Medical Institute at Opening

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, Aug. 30. — The establishment of the Ross Institute and Hospital for Tropical Diseases is mainly due to the efforts of Sir Ronald Ross, assisted by an enthusiastic body of professional and lay supporters. Sir Ronald himself is director-in-chief. Sir William Simpson is to be director of tropical hygiene and Dr. Aldo Castellani, who gained a high reputation in Ceylon, will be director of tropical medicine and dermatology.

The institute occupies one of the finest of the mansion houses on the fringe of Putney Heath, and with possibilities of large expansion as the work develops. The institute has well-equipped laboratories and libraries and it is hoped that it will become a Pasteur Institute for Tropical Diseases. Its primary purpose is research, and although tropical diseases, and malaria in particular, will engage much of the investigation, this will probably be extended to cancer and other diseases.

Sir Ronald has had difficulty in finding a supply of mosquitoes in the neighborhood of Putney with which to start operations, and had to call upon the good offices of the British Mosquito Control Institute at Hayling Island, Hants, for a consignment. The mosquitoes are now in small net-covered boxes, with raisins as their food, and a formidable array of apparatus waiting for them when the experts get to work. Victims of malaria frequently suffer during their illness from a form of insanity, and many cases of general paralysis are now being treated in England with inoculation of malaria, with good results. Similarly, the sting of a bee is popularly supposed to be efficacious in the case of rheumatism.

of distress among us. Money is being poured out like water and always seems to be plenty more to draw upon, despite the coal strike.

British Money Flows In Paris, Making French Envious

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, August 28.—The menace of annoyance to tourists in France seems to have been more apparent, than real; undoubtedly there have been cases of molestation, but they have been few, and the expressed determination of the French authorities to deal with anything of the kind has had a reassuring effect.

British tourists are, therefore, invading the French capital in big numbers, and are everywhere being received with the traditional courtesy of France.

The holiday fever was never stronger, and there would appear to be plenty of money. This may reasonably cause some annoyance to the impetuous French, who read much about our woes as an over-taxed community, but see little sign

Box Hill Estate, Famous in South, Is Saped to Nation

Reuter's Special to The Victoria Times

London, August 28.—The country is realizing the importance of safeguarding the open spaces round London, and valuable work has been done in this respect by the National Trust.

The new additions to the Box Hill estate which Lord Cave has formally "opened" are in their way as delightful as Box Hill itself. They are called White Horse and Cockshot Wood, and their passing into the possession of the National Trust brings up the area of the estate to something like 550 acres.

Box Hill is the most famous hill in the South country, and there was a time when it was in real danger of being exploited by the builder of villas. When Box Hill was saved the builders began to plan the conversion of its neighbor, White Hill, into a "suburb," but again they have been thwarted. With its alternations of bare downs and rich woods of beech and pine, Box Hill is a beautiful place.

The climb up the chalk path is steep, but from the top a view is gained of a great expanse of valley, and wooded hills, of which Leith Hill is the most conspicuous. Across the valley that leads to Guildford the spire of Ramore is seen among the trees, and farther away the opening in the woods at Newlands Corner, which the Duke of Northumberland and Mr. St. Loe Strachey lately have been working to save from being spoiled by the throng of motor cars.

This is pre-eminently the country of Meredith, whose home, Flint Cottage, nestles at the foot of Box Hill. The salvation of the 550 acres that now belong to the nation for ever has been a piecemeal affair, beginning years ago in Mr. Solomon's fine gift, and now completed by the acquisition of the neighboring slopes. The National Trust throws its estates open to the ramble without restrictions, except those necessary to preserve the trees and flowers and to prevent defacement from litter.

Cynthia Grey Says:

Careful Mothers See to Their Children's Amusements.

In these days of emancipated youth, it is a rare thing to see a mother questioning the amusements of her daughter to such an extent as to confer with the chaperon of school parties.

But if we saw more of this kind of thing, there would be fewer and little girls repenting at leisure the mistakes made in haste.

Anna Mary, writing me of her mother's strictness, has the usual attitude of youth toward its elders—that of bitter rebellion mixed with scorn.

"Why, Miss Grey," she writes, "I'm seventeen, and all the girls I go with are allowed to take care of themselves. My mother is so strict that the boys are almost afraid to ask me to go anywhere."

"I don't think it's fair for her to spoil my fun like that, do you? My senior hay ride will take place next week, and mother even insists on knowing who the chaperons are, and in talking to them herself."

"It's making me look silly to my friends, and I won't stand it much longer."

After all, looking silly to one's friends isn't worst thing in the world. If your mother can protect you from unpleasant experiences or from real danger, at the cost of some slight embarrassment to you, I should say, "well done."

However, I cannot see why your mother's solicitude should make you "look silly." There is no reason why your friends should know about it at all, if you do not choose to tell them. There are always other reasons to give for refusing invitations.

If you have nothing to conceal, it cannot hurt you for your mother to talk with the woman who is to chaperon the hay ride. You may be sure that the chaperon will only have a higher regard for you and your family if your mother does do this. You're sorry to seem unsympathetic, Anna Mary, but I think you should be a very grateful little girl, instead of a rebellious one.

The kind of mother you have is the best safety insurance I know of.

SHARP FARM FIGHTS IN UNITED STATES

Predicted Politics For Years to Come Will Be Affected

Washington, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press)—All the signs are that the struggle between the agricultural industry in this country and the political leaders and industrial and financial forces that are indifferent to agriculture or hostile to it is going to be fought out. The present outlook is that the next two years will see a bitter battle or series of battles. These will not be confined to Congress.

It now looks almost impossible to keep the agricultural issue out of the 1928 presidential campaign. The only thing that would keep this issue out of 1928 presidential politics would be the enactment in the meantime of legislation satisfactory to the farmers or such a degree of agricultural prosperity as would lessen greatly the demands of the farmers for relief action by Congress.

Of course, if the agricultural question is carried into the Presidential campaign, it will mean President Coolidge will encounter a hard fight for renomination. Mr. Coolidge has lost strength with many farmers since 1924. Lowden, Watson, Borah and others will seek the nomination. If Coolidge forces his own renomination, it will be because the man in the White House, or his aides, can usually dominate the political machinery of the Southern States, certain far-western states and much of the East.

SMITH MENTIONED

To put the matter in another way, in spite of agricultural opposition to Mr. Coolidge, based on the fact he has not favored farm relief legislation, it may very well happen that he will get enough delegates from the industrial East and from Southern and far-western states—organization controlled—to nominate him. Some of the Coolidge supporters think this, and they also think the Democrats will nominate Governor Smith of New York, and that Coolidge is stronger than Smith.

It does not seem possible that the agricultural controversy can be settled in the near future. It is more likely to run on for years. Representative Dickinson of Iowa, a farm group leader, just in from the West, says there is increased demand among the farmers for helpful legislation. The fight, he says, will be renewed next session of Congress. However, he realizes nothing is likely to be done then, as it will be a three-month session, and that there will be delay until the Winter and Spring of 1927 and 1928. Then the Old Guard leaders are expected to wage warfare on agricultural legislation, just as they have in the past session.

THIRD OF CANADA'S NATIONAL WEALTH IS IN AGRICULTURE

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—Agriculture throughout Canada seems to be far more secure now than for several years past. As a whole, it embraces one-third of the national wealth, so declared F. S. Archibald, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, in an address here to-day. Mr. Archibald indicated a number of ways in which experiments are being made at the experimental farms, in an interesting talk on the future of agriculture in Canada.

"It is quite possible," he said, "that with no more acreage than the present 22,000,000 under wheat cultivation in Canada, an increase of ten to forty per cent in production may be secured."

ANNUAL REGATTA AT SHAWNIGAN SUCCESS

All Land and Water Sports
Events Keenly Contested;
Large Crowd Attends

Special to The Times
Shawnigan Lake, Aug. 30.—The twenty-first annual regatta, held under the auspices of the S.L.A.A. was staged on Saturday afternoon. There was also a good programme of water as well as land sports, which were held in the field adjoining the hall and kindly loaned by James Finlay. The whole affair was an outstanding success. All the events were keenly contested.

The feature of the land sports was the 440-yard race and the one-mile mile race. Luckovich finished a good half lap ahead. Luckovich is a promising all-round athlete and will be heard from in future events.

A generous number of events were allotted to the children who thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The water sports followed immediately after the land sports and every event had a large entry. The mile single scull for the Feden cup, was the most exciting event and was won by Walter Elford. It was a hard race and the onlookers cheered to the echo the boy who won from men much older than himself.

The swimming and diving was good and the greasy pole afforded a great deal of merriment. Great credit is due to those in charge of both land and water sports for the promptness in getting the races off. The weather was ideal and the attendance good. Owing to a combination of circumstances there was no four-cared lapstreak races and the absence of the J.R.A.A. was regretted. The dance in the evening was a brilliant affair, close to 200 attending. The Hot Owl orchestra played excellent music and the dance was a success.

During the evening Col. W. N. Winsby presented the cups and trophies to the winners and in a short speech congratulated those who had been successful. It is only fair to state that it is owing largely to the good work of Col. Winsby and A. J. Worthington that the affair was such a success. The following were the officials in charge: Mr. Winsby, judge of land sports; Alderman W. H. Cullin, assistant judge; Syd Yates, starter; F. Yates, clerk of course; H. E. Hawking, chairman and E. M. Walbank, secretary.

The committees were: Finance—Col. W. N. Winsby, L. J. Whittaker, Walter Pelland, J. A. Worthington, N. G. Alexander and B. Lovell. Land sports—J. Dyson, Sam Finlay, H. E. Hawking, F. Yates, J. G. Orr, James Finlay and N. G. Alexander.

CHANGES WISHED BY CIVIL SERVANTS

Federal Employees Lay Requests Before Commons
Candidates in Vancouver

Vancouver, Aug. 30.—To inform the candidates in the federal election of the adjustments declared necessary in the service, a mass meeting of members of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada was held in the Columbia Theatre Sunday afternoon. Speakers outlined the salary situation, told of their dissatisfaction with the superannuation system and explained their desire for reclassification of the service.

The candidates present were Wilfred Hanbury, Brig.-Gen. J. A. Clark and Dr. W. J. Curry for Burrard, and Paul M. Kerr, Leon J. Ladner and A. Hurry for Vancouver South. All expressed appreciation of the opportunity to receive information of conditions in the service, and promised if elected to press for the desired adjustments.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED
At the close of the meeting two resolutions were presented and carried unanimously. One was that the leaders of all parties be requested to make public statements as to their attitude towards the upward revision of civil service salaries, and their policies in regard to obviating any future recurrence of the deadlocks that have already occurred between Parliament and the Civil Service Commission on the question.

The second resolution requested the leaders of the recognized parties to go on record as to their intentions towards making the employees of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment Board, the Income Tax Department and Public Works Department permanent employees under the Civil Service Commission.

SALARY QUESTION
In discussing the salary situation, Fred Knowles, president of the Amalgamated Civil Servants, told of the efforts of the organization to obtain higher remuneration. Following the war, in 1919, bonuses were given to offset the increased cost of living. Since that time numerous conferences, he said, had been held between the civil service organization and the commission to obtain wage increases, but without result. A new scale had been brought out in 1925, but instead of salaries being increased they had been lowered. This had led to strikes in Ontario and parts of Quebec at the time.

The speaker stated the organization was seeking to have the present salaries and bonuses combined as salaries, and a minimum wage of $100 a month set. He urged the candidates who were present to forget party affiliations when dealing with affairs of the civil service.

SUPERANNUATION
J. D. McCarthy, secretary of the central executive of the organization, dealt with the superannuation system. While the members of organization appreciated the fact they had had "this" "thing" a number of changes, he declared. These, he said, were suggested in the interests of efficiency, and they were the wishes of the 50,000 civil servants.

Under the present regulations of the Superannuation Act employees paid five per cent of their salaries for superannuation, the speaker stated. If an employee left the service at any time he lost the money he had paid in. This, Mr. McCarthy declared, was unfair. The employee was entitled to the money he had paid in, and it was the property of the employees and not the Government.

ONTARIO PLAN
The right of the civil servant to have his superannuation subscriptions returned, the speaker stated, was recognized by the Ontario Government, which returned money paid into the scheme in event of a member withdrawing before becoming eligible for a pension.

Another term of the regulations called for thirty-five years service or that the employee be sixty-five years old before becoming eligible for superannuation. Mr. McCarthy stated the organization desired that it be optional whether a man retire at the end of thirty-five years of service. He thought an employee should be allowed to retire before the age of sixty-five if the service requirement had been fulfilled.

Mr. McCarthy also pressed for a representative from the Amalgamated Civil Servants in the administration of the superannuation fund, because of the large amount of money the organization had invested in it.

RECLASSIFICATION
The demand for reclassification of the service was pressed by James Haslett and H. Broadhead. These speakers pointed out that employees of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department, the Income Tax Department and the Public Works Department were classified as temporary. As temporary employees they did not receive the same treatment as the permanent staff, being ineligible for superannuation, and having a different wage scale, which was lower.

It was pointed out that though the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and Soldiers' Settlement Board were departments formed after the war and possibility looked upon as temporary, there was now no indication they would be closed. The employees of these departments, they said, were for the most part returned soldiers, and for the past eight years had been in the civil service. It was given as the wish of both the temporary and permanent staffs that these branches should be classified as permanent.

The candidates present all stated they were in sympathy with the demands of the Amalgamated Civil Service, and promised their support.

about $800,000 was expended in the Pennsylvania primaries for the nomination of Mr. Vare. Upwards of a quarter of a million of dollars was spent directly for the Smith campaign in Illinois and more indirectly.

While the expenditures on behalf of Smith, so far as revealed, were not as great as those for Vare, Smith's payment and the non-confession of the state, will be worse. This seems certain now to be the case. It is added that by far the greater part of his campaign fund came from public utility magnates, headed by Samuel Insull of Chicago. Mr. Insull operates systems in the middle west that are capitalized at more than three-quarters of a billion. Colonel Smith is head of the Illinois Commerce Commission, or Utilities Commission, which regulates utilities.

Democrats and Progressives are expected to control the next Senate. It is not expected they will support either Vare or Smith, in spite of the fact of the personal popularity of Colonel Smith.

VANCOUVER MAN IS BELIEVED DROWNED

Capt. C. W. Whittaker, Great War Veteran, Missing; Row-boat Found

Vancouver, Aug. 29.—Finding of an empty rowboat beached on the shore of the Indian reserve, Kitlano Beach, early Sunday morning, following reports received at police headquarters that Capt. C. W. Whittaker, Nakusp, B.C., had been missing from his present residence at 1040 Granville Street, since early Saturday evening, when he announced he was going to take a boating excursion, leads police officials to believe the man met with tragedy in the dark waters of Kitlano Bay late Saturday night.

At 12:15 a.m. Sunday, H. Moore, 1040 Granville Street, reported Capt. Whittaker had failed to return home. A short time later a second report was received to the effect that four men, Thomas William and John Johnston, 1542 Second Avenue West, George Mould, 1862 First Avenue West, and Gordon Myers, 1634 Fourth Avenue West, had discovered a rowboat, hired from Simpson Brothers, English Bay, on the Indian Reserve beach.

Detectives found a man's jacket in the boat, in which were papers showing the owner to be Capt. C. W. Whittaker, a prominent member of the Great War Veterans' Association.

Nearly 100 yards east of the boat were found a man's hat and an oar from the boat. Efforts to locate the body proved futile.

FARMERS OF U.S. INCREASE THEIR MACHINERY TOTAL

Washington, Aug. 29.—The farmers of the United States may be in the throes of a depression, but last year they bought equipment worth approximately $55,000,000 more than the value of their machinery purchases of 1924, the Department of Commerce reports.

Sales of agricultural equipment for domestic use in 1925 aggregated $32,845,204, as against $27,924,547, while sales for export rose from $61,988,372 in 1924 to $64,934,212 in 1925.

Stone Age Days Are Revived

Hopi Snake Dance This Year Is Ritual of Distant Past

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Aug. 28 (By Mail).—Preparations are almost complete for the annual observance of the oldest, most colorful religious ceremonial on the North American continent—the world-famous Hopi Indian snake dance.

In all the world there is no ceremony like this. It is a religious rite performed exactly as it was ten, twenty centuries ago—a strange relic of the old stone age, when the dividing line between magic and religion was not clearly defined.

It will be witnessed by travelers from distant places. Men will come in automobiles, complicated products of the up-to-date Twentieth Century, to watch the desert Indians perform rites that were time-worn when Europe was an unpeopled wilderness.

A PRAYER FOR RAIN

The snake dance is an annual prayer for rain—an invocation to the gods that live in the sky and control the clouds and to the gods that live under ground and control the springs and rivers, joined in by the residents of six Hopi villages on a long mesa north of here.

First the Snake and Antelope clans meet to study various meteorological signs and determine the date for the dance. Then come many days of preparation. In no Christian church are preparations for a sacrament more carefully made.

A town crier announces the date from the housetops. The priests of the Antelope clan meet to set up the altar. They make a mosaic of different colored sands, which are sprinkled on the floor, with clouds and lightning represented symbolically.

Then the prayer sticks are made, with prayers and invocations at each step of the procedure. Each participant smokes the sacred pipe, and the altar is consecrated and blessed morning and night. Sixteen songs are chanted each day, to the accompaniment of rattles shaken by the priests.

In the snake "kiva," a sort of underground council chamber, the snake charm liquid is made. An Indian basket is placed on a special altar. In it are placed shells, charms, crushed nuts, and sticks. A priest, with much chanting and ceremony, pours water into it from the north, east, south and west. Other priests circle about it, chewing some desert herb and putting the liquid in the basket.

PRIESTS ARE ANOINTED

At last the charm nears completion. Each priest waves a "snake stick," with eagle feathers attached, and the sacred pipe is lit, the smoke being blown into the liquid. Four kneads it with white clay, and rubs the resultant paste on the bodies of all the priests.

This ceremony is supposed to protect them from snake bites in the deadly rattle snakes for the snake dance. When a rattlesnake is found a prayer is offered, meal is scattered on it and it is seized alive and brought back to the village. The Indians catch the snakes with uncanny skill. Four days are consumed in this snake hunt.

On the evening of the last day of the hunt the Antelope priests dance in the plain. On the morrow the snake dance begins.

It starts with the race of the young men. Long before sunrise the young Indians start from a place far out on the plain, beside a sacred spring. They cover the intervening miles with remarkable speed, loping up the sloping mesa to the cheers of the crowd. The priests receive them, and each runner deposits prayer offerings at the altar.

Then the captive snakes—sometimes there are as many as a hundred of them—are washed in the underground kiva. The priests squat and sing. Two priests take a handful of writhing, twisting snakes out of a jar and hand them to other priests who sit by a jar of consecrated water. The snakes are dipped in this and tossed on the sand of the sacred altar, to the tune of blood-curdling yells.

At sunset comes the snake dance proper, on the open plaza. Visitors, both Indian and white, line the mesa above.

First the Antelope priests appear, marching to a little cottonwood structure called the "kiva," in which are jars containing the snakes. In front of it is a hole covered by planks. It is supposed to be the entrance to the underworld, and the priests sprinkle sacred meal on it to notify the gods of the underworld that the dance is about to begin. Then they form a line and chant a monotonous sort of song.

The Snake priests appear next. They too sprinkle meal on the planks. Then they divide into groups of three and each group approaches the kiva in turn. One member takes a rattlesnake from a jar, puts it in his mouth, and prances away. One of his comrades dances beside him and the third follows in the rear.

THROWS SNAKE AWAY

Presently the man with the snake tosses it away; the third man sprinkles meal on it and picks it up, after which the two men in front of him return to the kiva for another snake. When all the snakes have been taken from the jars the chief priest draws a sacred circle in the ground, and all the priests rush up and drop the snakes into it. Then, at another signal, they seize the snakes up again, dash off to the four points of the compass and release them. After that come two days of feasting—although each priest is obliged to take a powerful emetic before he may join in it.

That is the famous Hopi snake dance—an attraction for tourists from all over the world. How the priests avoid being fatally bitten by the live rattlers they handle so carelessly is a mystery. But they always do.

WHY NOT MAKE ALL THE OLD DOLLS NEW?

A few of the hundreds of dolls collected by the Thanksgiving Doll Offering Committee.

Where is Susan Ellen now, do you suppose?

You remember Susan Ellen—that golden-haired doll you loved as a child, that could move her arms, go to sleep, and had three dresses all her own.

Perhaps you called her Elizabeth Evangeline. Some do.

Where is she now, do you suppose? In the attic rag-bag? Back on the hall closet shelf? Or locked away in an old trunk with the Calico Cat and that book of illustrated fairy stories? tribution of the dolls take place on Thanksgiving Day.

"Clubs and civic organizations everywhere we hope, will adopt the plan," says Miss Dorothy Johnston, one of the sponsors.

"Making old dolls new again requires just a little skill and effort. And there are plenty of orphans."

The picture above shows a few of the dolls which the organization already has collected and prepared for the Thanksgiving Day sale.

Will some one else try it?

DUFF FIGURE AT CUSTOMS INQUIRY

Former M.P. Asked by Counsel to Tell Commission About Statements

Halifax, Aug. 30.—William Duff, late M.P. for Queens-Lunenburg, N.S., and Deputy Speaker of the late House of Commons, did not appear before the Customs Inquiry Commission here this morning. He had been formally summoned last week and had agreed to appear.

This morning L. A. Forsyth, counsel for Mr. Duff, read a telegram repudiating the implication contained in a newspaper report of a speech made by Mr. Duff in Bridgewater, N.S., last month.

R. L. Calder, K.C., commission counsel, said Mr. Duff's telegram was a complete refutation of the matter and was satisfactory on the point it dealt with.

Mr. Calder, however, made formal application that Mr. Duff be required to appear before the commission as soon as the St. John sittings should be concluded. He did this, he said, because he had been informed Mr. Duff had declared the commission counsel was "afraid to call him because of what he would say."

In view of this statement, I have no other course but to ask the commission to return here after the St. John sittings and take up all these matters," declared Mr. Calder.

"In the past I have acted for Mr. Duff, and I tell him I am not afraid of him in any way," declared W. F. O'Connor, K.C., the other counsel for the commission. "I think the occasion is one which calls for action."

PUBLIC DUTY

L. A. Forsyth, counsel for Mr. Duff, tendered an apology to the commission and counsel on behalf of the former member of Parliament, for Lunenburg if his client had said anything which reflected on him.

"I have conversed with Mr. Duff and there was absolutely no suggestion by the member that either the commission or counsel was afraid of him. He said nothing which would suggest that the commission and counsel were actuated by anything but the highest motives and a strong sense of public duty."

"I don't want any apology," remarked Sir Francis Lemieux, the commissioner.

Mr. Forsyth said he had not heard Mr. Duff make the remark which was objected to.

Such a remark might have been made innocently or it might not. Surely it was not the province of the commission to investigate casual remarks. The commission, he said, could not deal with "idle rumors."

SPEECH IN BRIDGEWATER

When the commission opened its sittings this morning Mr. Calder said it had been the intention to examine Mr. Duff in regard to an alleged statement of his in a speech in Bridgewater, N.S., at the end of last month. A report of that speech in a local newspaper, from which Mr. Calder quoted, said Mr. Duff had threatened to make certain revelations if the "Tory whispering campaign" continued. The report in the newspaper continued:

"He (Mr. Duff) suggested he could tell of licenses for bonded warehouses being issued in Halifax since the Conservative Government came into power when, in one instance, $10,000 and in another $15,000 was placed in the pockets of those who were responsible."

"I know the facts and I will tell more some day if this whispering campaign continues," Mr. Duff was reported to have said.

INVESTIGATION SUGGESTED

It had been thought, said Mr. Calder, that this report was a proper matter for investigation because the Federal Government issued bonding licenses. To the casual reader, this would constitute a statement that bonding licenses were sold, two of them, one for $10,000 and the other for $15,000. That would be a proper matter for investigation by the Federal Government.

However, Mr. Forsyth had received a telegram from Mr. Duff in regard to the matter. It was this telegram he would read:

"Referring to your conversation last evening on report of my speech on customs matter appearing Chronicle July 30:

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel"

(Copyright)

This is a day that should be stimulating and helpful in planetary influences, according to astrology.

Again women are subject to the most encouraging and promising aspects making for success in public as well as domestic affairs.

This is read as a favorable day for romance and for love affairs, since it will enable women to take the initiative, the seers declare.

Weddings on this date should bring happiness and long life, for the aspects appear to presage congeniality and constancy.

Actors and actresses should make the most of to-day's opportunities, but they should delay the signing of contracts.

The theatrical season is to develop many surprising conditions which will be most fortunate for a few artists.

In the coming winter season music is to be a growing factor in American life, if the stars are read aright.

Operas are to be popular and new singers are to win fame.

In the West immense artistic enterprises are to be undertaken, it is foretold, and there is a sign of promise for art galleries and museums.

This is read as a day fortunate for educators and for progressive undertakings concerned with intellectual work.

FARMERS CROSSING BORDER TO CANADA DEPUTIZE FOR MAYOR IN FUTURE

Nearly Four Hundred From U.S.A. Came to Settle in Two Months

Besides Canadians flocking back from the United States as shown by recent Federal Government reports, there is an increase in United States farmers who are crossing the border to settle in Canada, a report received by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce shows.

Quoting Department of Immigration and Colonization figures to show that immigration of actual farm settlers from the United States to Canada continues active, the report says that in the months of June and July last the Canadian Government agent at Fargo, North Dakota, recorded the movement to Canada of 24 U.S. settlers. These farmers, accompanied by their wives and families, represented a population of 541, an increase of 49 per cent over the same period a year ago. They brought with them cash and effects to the value of $1,331,750.

Division of the stream of Norwegian immigrant farm labor from the United States to Canada is recommended by Arne Kidlat, secretary of the International League for Norway. The Canadian practice, he considers, offer great possibilities for those who wish to settle down to a life of farming.

ENGINEERS TO MAKE SURE HIGHWAY SAFE

Experts to Certify Cariboo Road Offers no Menace to Trains Beneath it

Engineers of the Board of Railway Commissioners will soon make an inspection of the new Cariboo Road to make sure that it does not endanger transcontinental railways curving through the Fraser River canyon beneath it.

It is the steep and rocky heights of China Bar Bluff that have worried railway engineers during the construction of the new highway. They feared a blasting out a grade from the walls of the canyon, the road builders might send rocks rolling down to railway tracks a hundred feet or so below. To make sure that no such menace existed the Railway Board appointed a commission of engineers to investigate. This commission made an inspection some time ago and will make a final trip over the road shortly.

It was at China Bar Bluffs that the modern engineers, just as their predecessors the builders of the old Cariboo-Wagon Road, found some of the most serious difficulties in the entire highway project. The rocks rise up almost perpendicular from the Fraser at this point and it was necessary to carve a road into this jagged bank. The old road was built on wooden cribbing, which has long since disappeared, but the new highway stands on heavy and well-anchored walls of stone.

"LA BOHEME" SHOWS LIFE AMONG ARTISTS IN LATIN QUARTER

Gay Abandon of Bohemian Life in Paris Seen in Victor's New Picture Starring Lillian Gish at the Dominion Theatre

La Boheme! The gay abandon of artists and poets in the Latin Quarter; the effervescence of true Parisians! The ardent love of a poet whose soul breathes romance—a maiden whose every thought is a poem—a flower of France. Hope—grief—despair—and a faith that passeth understanding!

"La Boheme," a story that has thundered down the ages—that has charmed millions, has come to the screen—a masterpiece as always. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first starring vehicle for the Lillian Gish has given the world "Romola," "The White Sister," and other great roles—but she literally is a girl of the Latin Quarter; a wistful idol of a poet's heart, whose last breath is a vow of undying love. She is inspiration and happiness—and untold woes. She is the embodiment of the tragedy of womanhood.

The famous story was adapted from the Henri Murger novel, the original romance, rather than from the opera, which only used an episode in it—and the result is a story of dramatic power that those who know the opera would never suspect. It grips the audience with its mastery of human emotions, but never for an instant does it lose that evanescent spell of entertainment.

King Victor's direction, faultless and artistic, was well expended on a remarkable cast. John Gilbert as Rodolphe, the romantic poet lover, handles the most difficult role possible with that rare understanding that makes it life itself, and Renee Adoree is charmingly French as Musetta.

Roy D'Arcy adds to the laurels he won in "The Merry Widow," with his portrayal of the suave boulevardier, Paul, while Edward Everett Horton and George Hassell as Rodolphe's Bohemian friends are a rare comedy foil. Karl Dane as the kind-hearted condescender, Frank Currier as the dignified theatrical manager, Rosita Martin as the motherly wife of the condescender, add subtle touches of talent. The staging and photography are marvelous.

All in all, here is a picture that one can't afford to miss. To do so would be to live in the consciousness that one had missed one of the genuine film classics. "La Boheme" has contributed in no small degree to the reputation of the screen as a medium of genuinely thrilling art.

Evolution and Great Debates of History

Sermon Preached by Rev. Dr. Arthur F. Barton, Pastor of the New Thought Temple, on August 22.

St. Paul was a great man: one of the greatest which history has ever produced. He bears the title of "The Apostle of the Gentiles." His writings—doctrine documents and epistles—have been classed by the Christian Church in all ages, as "inspired" and but for his work and ministry, Christianity, as a vital and regenerating force, would never have passed beyond the geographical boundaries of Palestine.

St. Peter was also a great man. He bears the discriminating title of "The Apostle of the Circumcision." He also has been classed as an inspired writer—two epistles in the New Testament bearing his name. His influence in history has been more vast than that of St. Paul, in one respect at least—namely, a stupendous organization, The Papacy, has been, very largely, built on his personality. Saint Peter, is a name high in the realm of ecclesiastical history.

Nobody questions the pre-eminence of St. Peter and St. Paul, as founders of the Christian Church, but strange to relate, these two personalities that stand enthroned at the dawn of Christianity, were not found to be always in perfect agreement. Sometimes they differed. At least once they actually quarreled. The record of the dispute and debate is to be found in Galatians, the second chapter and the eleventh verse: "But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed."

The great debates of history, of which this is one, mark the real steps in the intellectual progress of the world. And we can scarcely think of anything more fascinating than a study of the mental pugilism of the last one thousand years. In this discourse we shall seek to indicate certain laws or tendencies which characterize every great debate, theological, political or scientific.

First—Every great discussion has thrust into the historic spotlight certain commanding personalities. This we shall speak of as the "Law of Personalities." It is Luther and John Eck, Knox and Mary, Calvin and Servetus, Webster and Haynes, Lincoln and Douglass, Savonarola and Lorenzo. At the present moment the subject of universal interest is "evolution" and the two most famous opponents who faced each other were Clarence Darrow and the late William Jennings Bryan.

Second—There is something in every discussion which may be properly indicated as "The Law of the Thought Wave." Not infrequently it is referred to in the common vernacular as "The Craze." In the discussion of every social, scientific and theological subject, there is prone to develop certain thought waves, which sometimes assume the proportions of an intellectual stampede. In 1821, Byron, writing from Florence, says: "The Italians talk Dante, write Dante, think Dante and dream Dante, to an extent which would be ridiculous were they not so much in interest about it."

Third—There has never been a great historical debate which has not seemed to threaten the life of some existing institution. The institution in danger has invariably thrown its the ten thousand such amens if my voice was strong enough to cover the distance between this pulpit and Plymouth Rock. Let us get together. Let us tear down our meaningless denominational appellations. Let us sacrifice sentiment to service, historical pride to present opportunities and ecclesiastical dominion to spiritual conquest and achievement. Such an objective has been the driving force behind all great debates of history.

Intellectual freedom is the cornerstone of progress. Universal knowledge is the key to all our problems. An unfettered intellect and an unchained soul turn toward God as naturally as a flower of the field turns towards the sun. Then broken by the unreasonable prejudices of the past, and let us have Truth for authority not authority for Truth. Let us not be fearful of the "hot hand" for it is to be remembered that a hot hand is the safeguard of "cold feet."

We are face to face with a great discussion. The subject is no less than the Creation of Man. Was man the result of an evolutionary process or was the first man created directly and instantaneously by act of God? That is the biggest question that was ever asked. Not the great question but the biggest. Evolution is the largest, the biggest and the vastest question ever discussed by the Christian Church. Its proportions are overwhelming.

Evolution touches the Universe and is therefore as vast as the Universe. Evolution touches the beginnings of the race and is therefore as long as destiny. Evolution touches the realm of literature and is therefore as complex as language. Evolution touches

When experts differ and scholars disagree cautious men can only wait. The Bible is a document that is filled with facts pertaining to the doctrine of evolution. I shall not at this time enter into the description of these for fear that I may be charged as following a theological weakness of spiritualizing convenient or inconvenient passages of Scripture: I am seeking to emphasize a great truth, namely, that not with words' loud clashing nor roll of stirring drums, (conflicts between religion and science), shall the debate of evolution be settled.

Hear Me! During the past 300 years, in every discussion between the Scientist and the Theologian the Scientist has almost been right and the Theologian has almost been wrong.

Success in every debate depends upon clinging to the main facts. In this discussion the main fact is that

Los Angeles Passion Play

Home of Movie Stars and Press Agents Presents Reverent Drama of the Christ

By DAN THOMAS

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (By Mail)—America has a "Passion Play" of its own now.

And—wonder of wonders—this dramatic depiction of the story of the life of Christ, presented reverently and with no thought of profit, has blossomed almost in the backyard of the great moving picture industry, where sincerity of any kind is lost amid the welter of press agents, and where the dollar sign is emblazoned on every banner.

In Oberammergau, Bavaria, the peasants present their Passion Play every ten years. They do it as a religious rite, and their work carries its message of simple beauty and homely devotion to many thousands of people.

NO FAMOUS ACTORS

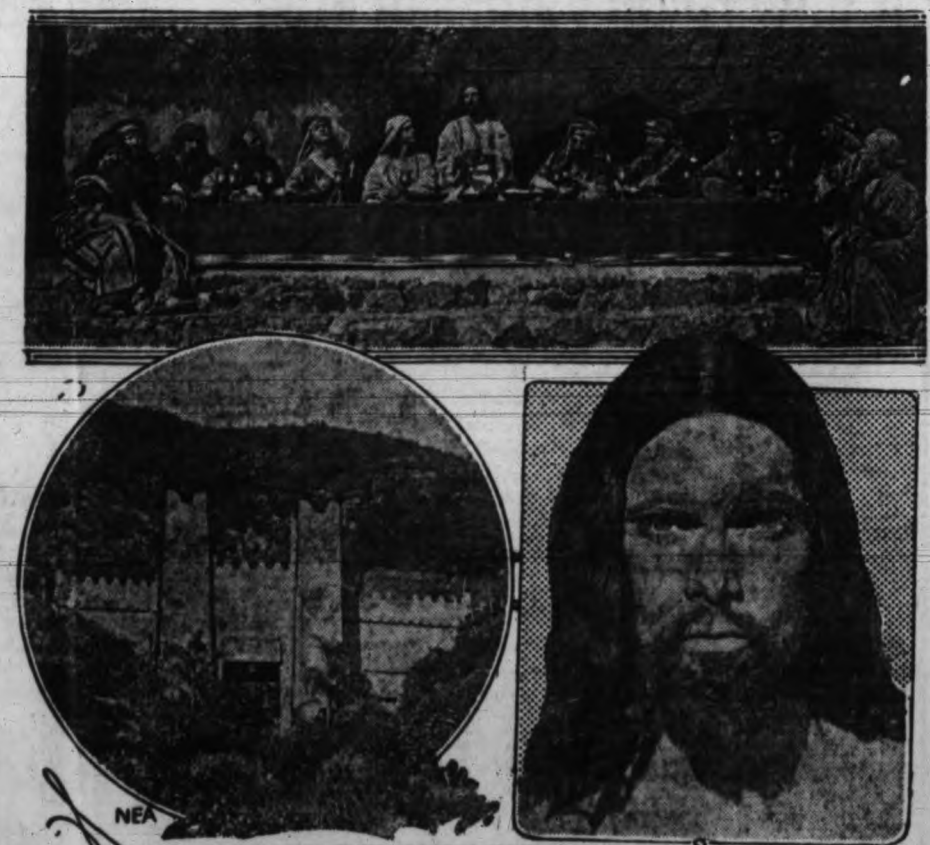

The play that is presented here is motivated by the same spirit. It is not done for money. It has no world-famous actors, no highly paid agents. An open-air theatre, with hard wooden benches, is the setting. Behind rise, the foothills, misty in the Summer twilight.

From the entrance to the theatre it is only a short distance to the million dollar moving picture studios, where "art" is translated in terms that sex appeal and thrills. It is incongruous. The unpretentious earnestness of the players at this theatre somehow makes the movie world seem false and unreal.

The play that is presented here is called the Pilgrimage Play. It is given every Summer as a result of the study and generosity of the late Miss Christine Wetherie Stevenson. Miss Stevenson spent many months in Palestine collecting data on Biblical times. Then she wrote the play—or, as she preferred to put it, she put the life of Christ into dramatic form.

Just before her death three years ago Miss Stevenson gave the play and her natural open-air theatre to the city of Los Angeles, stipulating that the play should be produced annually on a non-profit basis. The show, as a result, is now in its sixth year. It draws about 600 people nightly.

Unfortunately, a quarrel has marked this Summer's production. William Faversham, noted stage actor, was originally engaged to portray the Christ. Later he was dismissed, because the directors felt that his portrayal of the character was not as it should have been. They contended, that he should have presented the Christ as a gentle, retiring man of sorrows; Faversham insisted that the role called for a strong, virile impersonation. Reginald Pole is now playing this part.

Faversham's dismissal rankled. He accused the directors of the play of sneaking him merely to attract attention to the play by use of his name, and of planning when they hired him to dispense with his services. He has even filed a suit against them in court; meanwhile the play goes on.

ABLY PRESENTED

The audience is generally made up largely of tourists. They come, many of them, without expecting to see anything so very unusual; and they are agreeably surprised. They see a moving, reverent dramatization of the great story of Galilee. The settings and lighting effects, while not elaborate, are impressive and skillfully managed. There is no jarring note.

High over head, in the cloudless California sky, the night stars shine undimmed. The stage is a small spot of light against the darkness of the purple foothills. There is no sense of being in a theatre. Rather, the spectators feel that they are seeing a sincere attempt to reproduce the story of Christ.

The Pilgrimage Play is unique in Los Angeles. It is something the city may be proud of.

For Fall! Something Really New In Hats!

By HENRI BENDEL

ALL Summer millinery has been undergoing a subtle change, so that this Fall for the first time in several seasons there is really something new in hats.

The spell of the tight, close-fitting felt hat has been broken, and becomingness is again an element in head gear. We still have the untrimmed felt, with a much more interesting crown than before, but we have also velvet, silk and fabric hats.

This year's hats must be thoroughly sophisticated and must be casual enough to suit our thoroughly modern taste, but it may also be feminine and beguiling.

Of the utmost importance is the return of velvet, particularly the colored velvets, and the new adaptations of the turban and the wide brimmed hat.

Photographed to-day are two velvet and two velvet models that I have selected as typical of the Fall and early Winter mode.

The small velvet model that is practically a turban is of wine colored velvet of a particularly deep and luscious hue. A very narrow brim rolls softly up from the face and the crown is quilted in four sections, and a narrow bias band of the velvet ties in a knot at the right side.

While charming for Fall, this naturally suggests itself as the ideal accompaniment for the fur coat with the wide collar.

A fan of Japanese aligrette at the left side gives considerable dash to the small velvet model which is of the beige silk velvet, a shade or so lighter than the feather. The very soft crown may be draped to suit the features and taste of the wearer.

The velvet with the medium-sized brim is one that is usually becoming to almost any type of face—and it is extremely youthful as well. Brick red is the color, and the rolled brim is trimmed with satin and gros grain ribbon of the same shade, twisted in triangular patterns. About the very softly folded Alpine crown is an applied design of the ribbon.

With the sport frock, or the new tweed or jersey Fall frocks, there is no more suitable type of hat.

The black velvet draped model, though spoken of last, is really first in chic, I believe, and is the perfect combination of line and fabric. Black velvet is draped to form a visor brim, and cut glycerine ostrich, shiny and black, is applied over the crown in the most becoming manner.

Autumn's newest hats are deep and carefully fitted about the crown, and are worn well over the eyes. They are more effective than they have been in years.

Above, dashing silk velvet that can be draped to suit wearer; below, almost a turban, of wine-colored velvet.

Above, velvet of medium sized brim, charming for any face; below, black draped velvet with visor brim and cut feather.

Heed Precautions, Avoid Infections

By DR. M. METZENBAUM

Thousands of cases of contagious diseases every Summer are directly traceable to infections acquired at public bathing beaches and swimming pools.

These beaches and pools become polluted, sometimes by sewage or stagnant waste that is not washed away, sometimes by persons who are carriers of disease. Such persons may not realize that they are carrying germs; others are simply careless of the welfare of other bathers. Much can be accomplished by cities in the purification of the swimming places. Adequate circulation of water should be provided to prevent stagnation. Bathing can be forced to follow a few simple rules. When analysis shows a water to be dangerous to health, beaches should be closed.

HEAD ABOVE WATER

The individual can do much to protect himself. A safe thing to do in a crowded or public bathing beach is not to dive under the water and, as far as possible, to avoid even getting water into the eyes and outer ear canals. It is especially important not to take water into the mouth or have it enter the nose. Should the water enter the nose, then don't blow your nose with all might and main, for this might force the polluted water, along with the mucus in the nose, up into the sinuses or up into the eustachian or ear tubes into the middle ears, resulting in an infection of the sinuses of the ears or even causing a mastoid. If persons suffering from contagious infection were educated to the dangers to which they are exposing others, many of them would stay away from public pools and beaches.

DAUGHTER THEN

Again, these same persons may be suffering no longer from their own recent infection but fall victim to another. They have very little resistance to this new germ, and what they would call a relapse. In reality, however, this is a new infection implanted upon their old one, and these cases usually run a very severe course.

The natural question is—should one use an antiseptic wash in his nose after bathing at a public place? But logical answer is—never put any liquids into the nose for fear of forcing germs up into the sinuses or into the ear tubes.

Primitive Indians Made Largest Sun Dial in World's History

By DAVID DIETZ

ANNOUNCEMENT of the discovery of the largest sun-dial in America has just been made by the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The sun-dial is four and an eighth miles long. It was used fifteen centuries ago. It stands in Honduras, Central America in the Copan Valley. Here, from about the first to the sixth century of the present era flourished the city of Copan, the capital of the so-called Old Maya Empire. Maya Indians, descendants of this ancient race still live in Honduras.

The city was surrounded by a range of hills which rise to a height of 500 feet.

FOUND TWO MONUMENTS

High on the eastern range one and seven-eighths miles east of the city, a stone platform was found. On the platform was found a fallen stone monument.

On the very crest of the western range at a distance of two and a quarter miles due west of the city, a similar stone platform and monument, now also fallen, were found.

In 1914, the suggestion was made by Professor Robert Willson, Harvard astronomer, that these two monuments constituted a primitive astronomical instrument, a sort of sun-dial for observing the sun's position.

Because the western monument stood out sharply against the horizon, he thought it probable that the monuments were used for an observation of a sunset. If an observer stood at the eastern monument and sighted along its edge to the western monument there would be two days in the year when the sun at the time of setting would be directly on the line connecting the two monuments. It was decided this year that it would be highly valuable to determine the exact day at which the sun set behind the western monument in order that a more exact correlation could be ascertained. Accordingly, early in April, Dr. Morley, Dr. John Lindsay of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution and a number of other scientists, proceeded to Copan taking with them astronomical instruments and chronometers for making exact observations.

Round tower or caracol at Chichen Itza in Yucatan. This tower was used for solar observations by Maya Indians in same fashion as was the sun dial at Copan, Honduras, which Dr. S. G. Morley has been studying.

SAME CUSTOMS THEN

But an unforeseen difficulty arose. Throughout western Honduras it is the custom to burn the brush off the fields in April, preparatory to planting them in the rainy season which begins early in May. By April 5, the sky was so thick with smoke that it was impossible to see the western monument from the eastern one, even with the aid of a telescope.

However, observations were made of the sun from which it was possible to calculate the position of the sun at sunset. These observations showed that the sun would set behind the western monument on April 11. It is known that the ancient Mayas burnt the brush just as it is burned to-day. Dr. Morley believes, therefore, that the purpose of the huge sun-dial was to determine the time at which to start burning the brush. Dr. Morley said that the reason for waiting word from the priests was so that the burning would be pleasing to the gods and the subsequent crops would be good.

Dr. Frank McCoy's

Good Health Message

"The Fast Way to Health"

As a health service to the public we have arranged with Dr. Frank McCoy to publish his famous book on a mass production basis, to be sold at the ridiculously low price of

$1 Per Copy

Hundreds of distressing cases of ill-health in Vancouver cured by following the simple advice contained in Dr. Frank McCoy's book.

HERE is a book, a veritable gold mine of information—how to live—how to keep well—how to get well. Its price, ONE DOLLAR, is so far separated from its tremendous value to you and I, that one is forced to admit "The Fast Way to Health" is (to use a common expression) cheap at any price. Three hundred and thirty-three pages of good health advice—every paragraph an exposition of the right way to live—set down in simple understandable language. A reference volume that brightens every home it enters—that banishes the ravages of disease—a regular fortune in health advice—for a one dollar bill. Already hundreds of Vancouver sufferers have fought and conquered their ailments by following the advice contained in "The Fast Way to Health." These once unfortunate people DEFINITELY cured themselves, even as every sick person will who conscientiously carries out the directions set down by Dr. Frank McCoy in his famous book. It will enter your home like a brilliant light. Not for the sufferer alone, but for the healthy also. Not as a cure-all, for the cure rests with the ability of the sick one to follow its simple advice. You will really and truly know your physical self, when you have read "The Fast Way to Health." Protect your family—get a copy!

HUNDREDS of thousands of men, women and children are actually eating themselves to death. Do you know that first and foremost in the cause of disease is the congestion of blood containing morbid material in organs or tissues of the body. This thickened blood, surcharged with the products of metabolism, finds itself unable to pass as freely as is necessary for perfect health, and, becoming gradually dammed up in organs and tissues, produces an engorgement which interferes with the free and natural functioning of that particular part. It is not exaggeration to say that this condition is the principal cause of all disease.

In Dr. Frank McCoy's book—

The treatments of over 38 diseases are given. 23 chapters are devoted to the choice of right foods—simple exercises and correct menus.

ASK yourself now. Can you be without this remarkable volume? Are you quite content to pursue your daily life, flirting with disease, and even death, knowing that bounding health is within your reach? There is not the slightest doubt that every living person seeks the joy of a healthy life—contentment. It is within your reach now—your's and your family's—take it!

METABOLISM: This term is used in Biology to sum up the changes which take place within the body, or in a body cell, by which the food is changed into living tissue, and on the other hand the tissues are disorganized and prepared to be expelled from the body. Thus it signifies the sum of the constructive and destructive forces.

A PART from its store of information and cures for diseases peculiar to women, "The Fast Way to Health" is invaluable to the housewife as a daily reference book on the preparation of the family meals. Its enlightenment in this respect alone places as great a value upon it as that portion of it which deals with disease cures. The book is absolutely free from anything that suggests "food faddist." But the housewife, and especially the mother caring for a large family, will find it a reliable and authoritative reference book on correct food preparation and cooking. When to eat—when not to eat—what to eat, and how to cook it.

The book's advice and directions on the care of young babies from birth should be in every home where so young a being has made an appearance. "The Fast Way to Health" advises a mother how to correctly care for her children from time of birth up to maturity. It enables her to impart new health to her family through the medium of the delicious wholesome foods; it advises her how to prepare.

To be without Dr. McCoy's book is to deny yourself and family the wonderful and reliable health facts it contains.

Here is the reason why you can get this famous health volume for $1.00:

EVERYONE has read Dr. Frank McCoy's health talks at some time. The tremendous public interest in his daily articles was effectively demonstrated but a few weeks ago, when thousands of people flocked to hear Dr. McCoy whilst he was in Vancouver. The public plainly evidenced their desire for health knowledge. Arrangements were therefore made with Dr. Frank McCoy to have his famous book published on a mass production basis, so that everyone, rich and poor alike, might be afforded the benefit of the wonderful advice it contains.

Possessors of the book will also better enjoy and appreciate Dr. McCoy's daily talks in The Sun, for his book is an excellent supplementary reference to the Doctor's daily talks. Furthermore each book contains a coupon which entitles the purchaser to

FREE! Personal Advice

This special coupon entitles the purchaser to ask a personal question. The question will be answered by Dr. McCoy personally. It is practically certain that you have never before been confronted with such a rare opportunity. A beautiful volume, bound in high-grade heavy stiff linen cover—333 pages—the privilege of asking one question to be answered personally by Dr. Frank McCoy—a store house of information—how to get well and how to keep well—for ONE DOLLAR only.

KAIKYU MARU STRIKES IN JOHNSTONE STRAIT; CREW LANDED SAFELY

The Japanese freighter is a steel vessel of 5,045 tons gross, 445 feet long, 45 feet beam and 24 feet draft. She was built in 1919 for the Katsuma Kisen and Kabushiki Kaisha. Her conditions hold good if it may be possible to salvage the vessel, although it is expected that the cargo will be lost. WET WIGGILY CASE

By Carolyn Wells

© 1926 by G. P. PUTNAM SONS

"Well, I'll coax you, then. Go, dear, there's a good girl. You will, won't you?"

"I-I don't know."

Now Bunny had immediately and fully made up her mind to go, but she couldn't resist the chance to tease Larry. He was so ridiculously insistent.

Then just at that crisis, the door-knocker sounded, and Herick admitted three callers.

CHAPTER XIX.

The three callers were Mrs. Prentiss and her nephew, Todhunter Buck; and with them was a young man, a stranger to Bunny, but an acquaintance of Inman, Alexander Cunningham.

"I'm out to find Perry Heath," Cunningham said, after they had all seated. "I'm sure you understand, Mr. Inman, the interest and anxiety felt by the Country Club members, and as they can't do much as a body, they've asked me to institute a search for Heath, and, also, to do what I can toward unravelling the mystery of Mrs. Heath's tragic death."

"Detective work?" asked Larry, in a non-committal voice.

"Yes, but not professional. Some men like Arthur Black, Sam Anderson, and others of that crowd, have, in a way, engaged me to do this, and I'm mighty glad to try. We are assuming that as the nearest kin of Mrs. Heath, you will sanction any and every effort to solve the mystery of the case."

"Well, I'm not sure about that," Inman said, slowly. "I want to know who killed my cousin, of course, but your blanket proposition as to a bit and every effort seems to me a bit over-unlimited."

"You want to limit it, asked Cunningham, his cool grey eyes fixed on Larry's face."

The latter looked up, quickly.

"Perhaps not limit it—but, rather, assist in its direction."

"Oh, that's all right, we're glad of any assistance. Now, while I'm not a professional detective, I am acting under authority, I am endorsed by the club, and so I trust I'm not exceeding my rights in asking for the freedom of the house for purposes of investigation."

"You mean unquestioned access to all rooms?" Inman stared at him.

"I mean just that," and Cunningham stared back. "I can imagine no possible objection. The examination of Mrs. Heath's room is of utmost importance, and I'm sure Miss Moore would say no word against my entering her room."

"Indeed I would!" and Bunny drew herself up, eagerly. "Why should you go into my room, Mr. Cunningham?"

"It is an established custom, Miss Moore, to inspect carefully, and with an eye to helpful evidence, all parts of the house and grounds in which a crime has been committed. I am sorry to say, the police, in this case, have been lax in this respect. But I am told it is due to the absence of Mr. Heath. That, however, is really an additional reason for haste and care in the matter of search, for Mr. Heath's disappearance is a puzzle in itself, and it is highly probable that the two mysteries are interdependent."

"Now, Mr. Cunningham," Mrs. Prentiss broke in, "you're wasting good time, thrashing out foolish questions. Of course, Mr. Inman wants you to have full swing here, and likewise of course, Miss Moore wants you to make a full search. She's new to this business and doesn't understand. So you go right ahead, full steam, and I'll bet a corky you unearth some clue that nobody else has noticed. You go into that studio there—that's where the awful thing happened—and you see what you can see!"

Cunningham disappeared into the studio, with young Buck following, like a shadow at his heels.

"All rubbed down and polished up!" cried Cunningham, disgustedly, as he saw the spick and span room. "I did think they'd have the place guarded from that sort of thing."

"What are you out for, anyway?" asked Toddy, who was eagerly waiting to see the detective work.

"Oh, just hints—but who could get any hints here? Body gone. Weapon removed—even the broken bits of glass swept up!—No chance for foot prints on this thick carpet. No finger prints on these carefully dusted knick-knacks and doo-dads. Even Heath's painting materials are all put away as neatly as a lady's work basket!"

"But what good would finger prints do you?" If they were those of the family party, they would mean nothing. And if strange ones, how would you know whose?"

"Point pretty well taken. And, I'm not really keen for finger prints, I just want something—something indicative or suggestive. Well, here are some letters." He ran over a handful he drew from a pigeonhole.

"Nothing any good! They're bills or club notices, mostly. No billets doux from adoring damsels or anything like that. My, he has a lot of pipe cleaning paraphernalia! Look at all these contraptions."

Toddy Buck gazed without interest at the array of patent devices for cleaning pipes or cigarette holders.

"Too many," he said, contemptuously. "An old bit of wire does me. And say, how tidy he keeps his paints. Look at these water-color boxes. All in perfect order. I thought artists were a messy lot."

"Heath isn't. He loves things orderly. His wife did, too. In rows in these two cabinets. Not a piece set awry, and all shining and speckless."

"Yes, and there's a row of old bottles like the one she was killed with." Toddy spoke in an awe-stricken tone. This business seemed a bit prurient to him, though he was deeply interested.

"Now, maybe, Mr. Cunningham," he went on, "maybe the murderer, whoever he was, touched up the lady's face with these paints, instead of regular cosmetics."

Al Cunningham looked up quickly.

"It might be possible. I can't visualize that scene, Buck. If Heath killed his wife, I can understand his painting her face, for he was always at her to do it herself, and, too, he was an artist and forever dabbling with brushes. But I don't think he killed her. For there's no way he could get out. Whereas, if he went away, before she was killed, then clearly some one in the house is the criminal, and tried to turn suspicion to Heath by setting up the card and all that."

"Yes, and it mostly rests on Herick's word. But why should he lie about it? Nobody suspects him; he was devoted to Mrs. Heath, and Perry, too. And he could never have put on that make-up so artistically, so perfectly. No, it was the work of an artist—or a woman."

"The maids?" queried Buck. "For of course, you can't mean Miss Moore!"

"I mean anybody and nobody. There is no one above suspicion. I'm merely inquiring about everybody. Well, I'm going upstairs. Bedrooms often tell tales that living rooms know nothing of."

Cunningham went upstairs, and at his nod of invitation, Toddy Buck followed.

"I don't get it," Cunningham mused, as they entered Heath's bedroom. "Both Inman and the little princess seem all upset at my investigations. Are they shielding Perry? Or anybody else? For you know if this thing is the work of an outsider, those two must have let the outsider in and let him out again, and also they must have let Heath out."

"Unless he went off naturally, and unquestioned, before the tragedy occurred," Toddy said.

"Yes, that's true talk. Now you see, Buck, we must get in our minds a picture of this room of Perry Heath. Look at this place, now. Can't you read Heath all over it?"

"That's the housemaid's work." "I know it, but Perry kept them so. You can somehow see that. Look in his dresser drawers. I'll bet his socks and handkerchiefs are in neat piles." He opened one after another, and the clothing was as tidy as he had expected it to be.

"And here's an easy chair, drawn up to the window, with a smoking stand beside it, and a paper rack nearby. He is a bit of a Sybarite, is Perry, and yet a tidy sort, too. The two traits don't often go together."

"Well, what you've found out about his neatness and his love of ease doesn't get you along very far in solving the mystery, does it?"

"Don't be impatient, son. All in good time. Now, I have this room photographed on my mind in detail; come on, we'll tackle Mrs. Heath's room."

"Oh, I don't like to," and Buck drew back with a natural instinct against invading the sanctity of the dead woman's apartments.

"All right, you stay out, or go back downstairs."

But Toddy was naturally inquisitive, and, too, he was bound to be in on this detective business, so he followed the older man across the threshold.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily's Paint Brush

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

By HOWARD R. GARIS

"Because I'm too sad," said the frog.

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily was about to hop away from his hollow stump bungalow, he saw Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy, sitting on the front steps looking very sad.

"What's the matter, Johnnie?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"Oh, I feel so sorry for my brother Billie," chattered Johnnie.

"Why? What has happened to Billie?" the bunny gentleman wanted to know.

"He had to go to the dentist so have a tooth pulled," and Johnnie almost sobbed. "Oh, dear!"

"That is very kind of you to have sympathy for your brother, but why cry about it?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "I'm not exactly crying for Billie, I'm crying for myself, 'cause I got to have a tooth pulled to-morrow."

"Oh, that's different," said Uncle Wiggily. "But now, to make you and Billie both forget about such and things as pulled teeth, I am going to take you on a picnic to the woods. Come, we'll wait outside the dentist's office until Billie comes out and then we'll have fun."

With that Johnnie's tears dried up and blew away, and when Billie's tooth was pulled (and it didn't hurt him half as much as thought it would) the bunny uncle took the two little squirrels on a picnic. With them went Jingle and Jangle, two of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit girls. They found a shady place in the woods, near a spring, to eat the lunch Nurse Jane had put in baskets for them, but it was a little early yet, so Uncle Wiggily said:

"I will sleep before I eat," and he picked out a mossy green log for his bed.

"Pleasant dreams," chattered Johnnie, as Uncle Wiggily was closing his eyes and giving a last twinkle to his pink nose. "Pleasant dreams!"

"Oh, dear! I wish I could have pleasant dreams!" croaked a sad voice, and from the rushes at the edge of the spring sprang up a big bull frog.

"Why can't you have pleasant dreams?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Because I am too sad," croaked the frog, and then the animal children noticed that he was all splashed with red, green, blue and yellow paint. "I am an artist," went on the frog. "I have a picture almost done, but just now the blue Jay bird swooped down and took away my brushes, and now I can't finish my painting. Oh, dear!"

And just then Johnnie looked at the rabbit gentleman and chattered: "Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Your tail is just like a brush. Can't you let Mr. Frog take it?"

Not very well, it is too tightly fastened to me," said the rabbit. "But, Mr. Frog, if you had your partly finished picture here, and your paints, and would tell me what to do, perhaps I could dip my tail in the colors and hop this way and hop that, up and down, putting on streaks and tints until the picture was done."

"Oh, wonderful!" croaked the frog. Quickly he brought from the rushes a square of white birch bark on which was a partly finished picture. The frog then spread out on a log some dabs of green, blue, red, black and yellow paint he had made from the flowers. "Now, Uncle Wiggily," croaked the artist, "please dip your tail in some red paint and hop to the left," which the bunny did.

Next he dipped his tail in the blue paint and bobbed up and down, rubbing the color on the bark.

"What did I paint that time?" asked Mr. Longears, for, of course, having his back to the picture, he couldn't see what he was doing.

"You painted part of a house," said the frog. "And now dip your tail in the blob of black paint and jump up and down hard," and while Uncle Wiggily was doing this Jingle and Jangle screamed.

"What did I paint that time?" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"You painted the nose of the Bob Cat and a lot of the black paint got in his eyes!" croaked the frog. "And he's running away as fast as a roller skate!"

And that's just what happened.

The Bob Cat, seeing Uncle Wiggily's back turned, tried to slink up and nibble the bunny's ears, but with the black paint in his eyes, Uncle Wiggily daubing it there with his tail as he flopped up and down, the bad chap couldn't see, and, howling, he ran away.

Then Uncle Wiggily dipped his tail in yellow paint and finished the picture, and after the picnic, to which the frog was invited, the funny croaking artist sold the painting for money enough to buy a new brush. So everything came out all right.

And if the pepper caster doesn't sprinkle salt on the tail of the wild cucumber and make it tame, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the crow.

HAPPY REUNION

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Separated at the time of the great Chicago fire fifty-five years ago, a brother and sister have just been united. In 1871, Amelia Schultz lived in a section of the city swept by the fire. She fled. Her brother, John and her father lived in another section, but Amelia did not know the address. After the fire her folks were unable to locate her. Near Naperville, Ill., at the farm home of John, sixty-four, he and Amelia, sixty-three, now Mrs. Amelia Law, have had a happy reunion.
